● Elizabeth (Reiss) Baecher (LSY: 6eme in 1948) wrote: "No earthshaking developments for quite a while -- I continue to volunteer for Ride Connect, a branch of Westchester County, NY Family Services. This program helps people of all ages get to needed destinations, thus avoiding often unaffordable cab rides to doctors, groceries and etc. Ride Connect welcomes volunteers, so if in this area and wanting to help, please call 914-242-7433. Attempted improvement at duplicate bridge remains on the schedule as well."

● Jean-Pierre Cauvin (LSY: Terminale in 1954) wrote: "Reunion news of classmates of the class of 1954 : Jean-Pierre Cauvin and Alexis Sossinsky ('54) (plus daughter Anna S.) in Paris April 19 after an 8-year hiatus. JPC met with Guy de Catalogne ('54) together with spouses April 25 after a 12 year hiatus. Post-retirement experiences and reminiscences shared."

● Philippe De Montebello "the former director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, doesn't exactly need another job. He is chairman of the Hispanic Society of America; a professor at New York University's Institute of Fine Arts; an honorary trustee of the Prado Museum; and a host of the PBS TV program 'NYC-ARTS.' But now Mr. de Montebello has decided to add yet one more, becoming a director of Acquavella Galleries, effective immediately, where he will focus on the curation of special exhibitions and the development of publications. 'I think it's one of the great art galleries,' Mr. de Montebello said in a telephone interview. 'We have been talking over the last few years since I left the Met about how I could use some of my academic and other experience with the gallery.' Mr. de Montebello and Bill Acquavella, who runs the gallery with his children, have been friends for some 50 years....." (NY Times, July 26, 2017)

● Guy Weyl (LSY: 6eme in 1948) "was born in Strasbourg, France. He came to America with his family at the beginning of World War II and they became American citizens. Homesick for France, Guy returned to attend the prestigious Physics and Chemistry School of Paris in 1960. After his graduation, he returned to the U.S. to begin his career in infrared physics, and then pursued a PhD in theoretical plasma physics at UCLA as a Hertz Fellow (1967). Guy worked for several decades as a physicist in companies doing government funded research, where he specialized in the interaction of high intensity laser beams with materials. In addition to his passion for math and science, Guy always has been (and still is) an avid skier. Weyl's skiing claim to fame is to have beaten the future world ski champion, Jean Claude Killy, in a slalom race in Val d'Isere, 'I was 22 and placed 3rd; he was 15 and fell.' "

Editor's Note: We wrote to Guy to confirm that the above article was about him, and he replied: « C'est bien moi. Tout est vrai, sauf que la raison de notre retour en France est que la société de mon père a fait faillite et que, grâce aux dommages de guerre, il a pu reprendre ses affaires en France. Il n'aurait pas voulu quitter New York car il se sentait bien Etats Unis. »

- Elizabeth (Reiss) Baecher wrote: "Nothing that great to report other than enjoyment of travel and duplicate bridge, on line, in clubs and at tournaments. Other involvements include politics, blogging, metal detecting, bottle digging and occasional hikes. It would be fun to learn news of former classmates and what is going on in their lives. Perhaps more class stories will show up next year? That will be a great deal more fun than hearing echos of my own voice!"

- Pictures, Passions and Eye: A Life at Sotheby's, by Michel Strauss: "[He] embarked on an enduring love affair at the age of six when he saw for the first time paintings by Manet, Monet and Degas: the passion aroused by these artists never left him. This passion, this 'eye' as he calls it led to his becoming Head of the Impressionist Department at Sotheby's where he remained for forty years. He describes the personalities he met along the way: the collectors, the dealers, the colleagues and even the forgers, as well as the clients who shared his passion....."

University. Taught at MSU (1963-1974) as assistant and then associate professor of the Topology Chair..... He was forced to leave MSU for political reasons in 1974, worked as the math editor of Kvant magazine (1975-1989), wrote several articles and did a lot of creative rewriting of popular science materials for Kvant. He was (and still is) active in the International Mathematics Tournament of Towns (in particular in its Summer Schools). He resumed teaching at the university level after perestroika (1989), first at the Moscow Institute of Electronics and Mathematics, and then at the Independent University of Moscow. Was the Moderator of the Panel Mathematiques et Grand Public at the First Congress of the European Mathematical Union (Paris 1992).....He has written several popular science booklets in mathematics..... Alexei is basically a research mathematician (algebraic and geometric topology) and university teacher, without any published research work in mathematical education, but has always had a strong interest in mathematical education, mathematics competitions, and the popularization of mathematics." - Elizabeth (Reiss) Baecher shared this with us: "Not all that much to report from here. I am involved in the congressional and state senate campaign, play as much on line bridge as I can find time for, and for exercise, hike and go on coin and bottle digs. I don't expect to find anything of great value, but it's great fun."

- "Michel Strauss brings to Fine Art Wealth Management over 43 years of experience advising many great collectors and has been responsible for the sale of numerous important paintings and collections. An Art Historian and renowned expert in the field of Impressionism and 20th Century art, his expertise covers the period from 1865 to 1973, from the birth of Impressionism to the death of Picasso. Michel Strauss was Head of Sotheby's Impressionist and Modern Art Department and Board member from 1965 to 2000. During this time he assisted the British Rail Pension Fund in building their collection from Impressionist paintings from 1974 to 1979. Following his successful career at Sotheby's, he went to work for Bernard Arnault of LVMH to build their corporate collection in Paris followed by a brief period at Phililips de Pury & Luxembourg before becoming an independent consultant." - Avis de Décès: From a friend and neighbor, who wrote this to us: Sylvine Van Merlen "passed away on April 2, 2009, at Pleasant Bay Rehabilitation Center in Brewster, MA. She succumbed after a lengthy battle with cancer and left no survivors. Prior to her illness, Sylvine had served for many years as a housekeeper/companion par excellence to my elderly (age 94) neighbor and we both became very fond of her. In fact, we were at her bedside at the moment of her demise. She will be sorely missed, as will the entertaining (but often conflicting) accounts of her life with which she regaled us...."

- Elizabeth (Reiss) Baecher told us that she took a Caribbean cruise last year with her son and family. Her son "took a picture of me holding a giant python." She calls the picture: "Travel Often - Meet New Friends!"

- "The Metropolitan Museum of Art, founded in 1870, is enjoying a golden age. And if a single person can be said to have shaped this extraordinary era, it's Philippe de Montebello, the director of the museum since 1977. The announcement last winter that he would step down by the end of the year has provoked stock taking and soul searching inside the museum and beyond...."

"Ending months of fervid speculation, the Metropolitan Museum of Art reached into its own ranks on Tuesday and chose Thomas P. Campbell, a 46-year-old English-born tapestries curator, to succeed Philippe de Montebello as director and chief executive. The appointment, effective Jan. 1, was approved in a late-afternoon vote by the museum's board of trustees after a suspenseful eight-month search that began when Mr. Montebello, 72, announced plans to retire after 31 years in the post...." - Jean-Pierre Cauvin wrote: "A festive reunion of Anciens des années 1952-1954 took place just outside of Paris, last June 24. After much sleuthing to track down those with whom contact had been lost, and thanks to much e-mail communication across continents and oceans, the following alumni spent a memorable afternoon together at the home of Guy de Catalogne and his wife, Denise, in Le Vésinet: Maryse Haan Anderson (Falls Church, VA), Alain Brodin (Paris), Jean-Pierre Cauvin (Austin, TX), Fabrizia de Ferrariis-Salzano Pratesi (Rome), Dominique Lucet O'Cornesse (Paris), Gisela Mangones Vallat (Orlando, FL), Renaud Segalen (Neuilly-sur-Seine), Alexis Sossinski (Moscow). We were privileged to have our "prof de philo" of yore, Jacques Fauve (Paris), join us. In most cases more than forty years had elapsed since we had last seen each other. Yet the closeness and depth of the friendships that had been forged in the Lycée years were immediately and joyfully revived. Plans are already set to meet again in 2002."
