attended and graduated from the Lycée Français de New York. During that time, he was in school productions of classic French and Greek plays. He also began developing clever literary prowess that led him to being published in several poetry anthologies. He would later apply his literary skills to develop an effective scriptwriting method. Many years later after his tenure as a production assistant for Sam Bassett, a renowned photographer and intriguing filmmaker, he decided he had acquired the filmmaking skills and began pursuing endeavors of his own." LFNY: Any opportunity to take my camera out was a good one --parties with friends, spring fairs at the LFNY, teacher-parent meetings, the prom, the gates in Central Park, anything. Nowadays, people seem to always be in a hurry and for many of my generation, reading has become mainly a means to an end. Using visual content seems to be more appropriate as a way to mix entertaining and information. With Daniel Duchene, an alumnus of the French International School of Washington D.C., I decided to create WEDIAWIX, a mixed media collaborative company. Relocated in San Diego, CA, WEDIAWIX uses a diversity of methods of expression to share information through media in the purpose of creating social awareness, entertainment, and a platform for contributive exchanges. Built on our strengths and experiences, WEDIAWIX enables us to share a passion and a vision of the world....." (Click here to read more about Shaan's vision and her WEDIAWIX project)
